EARLY SETTLERS ON LENOX MOUNTAIN

By Emilie S. Piper

Four years before the incorporation of the town of Lenox, Massachusetts in 1775, there were families who carved out farms on the southern plateau of Lenox Mountain near the Richmond border. If you drive over the present Reservoir Road it looks much as it must have appeared to Samuel Dunbar in 1771, except that the woods would have been denser, the trees larger, and Lenox Mountain Brook would not have been dammed for the town's water supply. Today it would seem an odd choice for farming, but the Dunbar property had a southeastern exposure, and ran along both sides of the brook at an elevation of about 1600 feet.

Another road, west of the present reservoir, and almost parallel to Lenox Mountain Brook was called Dunbar Road, and joined Osceola Road in Richmond. Now the Lenox portion is a lane through the woods. Perhaps Samuel Dunbar was the one who originally cleared it.

That was the setting when Samuel Dunbar (b. 1725) first bought the land from Samuel Goodrich in 1771, and located there. He and his wife Lois had nine children: four sons - Daniel, Samuel, David, and John; and five daughters - Lois, Phoebe, Rebecca, Eunice, and Anna. Daniel, Samuel and David are listed in the Lenox Trinity Church records several times. David married Sarah (Sally), the daughter of Reuben Root, their nearest neighbor.

Samuel, senior, died in 1820, age 95, owning an estimated 44 acres, 3 sheep, a few books, kettles, pewter items and the like. He had boarded with his son Samuel from 1811 to 1820. Samuel, senior's oldest son David had the "use of 44 acres on the mountain" for nine years before his father's death.

Daniel, born 1770, married Candace Andrews. Her family had moved from Connecticut to Richmond when she was a child. Daniel and Candace Dunbar had three children. The oldest, Harriet died at age 22, in 1823. Eliza and Daniel Franklin were the heirs; their father's will in 1843 reads "to Eliza Dunbar...all the said land I purchased from Reuben Root, containing 16 acres and a half, and also all the land I purchased of Selah and Jonathan Andrews...in Lenox, containing 50 acres more or less, being in two parcels...all the rest in said Lenox estimated at about 100 acres." How, or whether she used this considerable acreage needs to be investigated. By 1855 she married a widower named James Sidney Smith, and appears to have moved to town.

Her brother, Daniel Franklin and wife Fannie A. had sons: Herbert died at age 27, Milton, Samuel, George Franklin, and lastly Eugene who finally moved to Kansas. Daniel Franklin was active in the town and was tax collector in 1864. He appears to have prospered. In May of 1878 he received a promissory note from George W. Cook of Richmond, for $25.00, for 49 sheep, 38 lambs, 4 cows, 1 yearling, 1 colt, 1 bay horse "the best one," 2 sleighs, 2 wagons, 1 gray horse, and 2 calves about 1 month old.

Daniel F. died in September of 1884, about six months after Samuel and Milton applied for guardianship. Perhaps their father had suffered a stroke or some other serious health problem. In his will he divides the land between the four sons; all but George are listed as farmers in Lenox in the 1874 County Directory. In 1885 George is a watchman in Richmond at the iron works there, and Milton is a carpenter and builder.

A 1904 map shows Samuel Dunbar, grandson of the first Samuel at the homestead at the north end of Dunbar Road near the Richmond line, and George at the south end, near Reservoir Road. Milton's property was across the road from George's.

In the Lenox tax list of 1915, in the Town Report of that year, Samuel Dunbar owns 6 horses, 7 cows, 8 other cattle, and 40 fowls. After Mrs. Samuel Dunbar's name the entry is: "the house, barn, hen house" - valued at $2,250, on 54 acres. Theirs was the last farming enterprise on the mountain, 144 years after the first Samuel.

Reuben Root and his family were the nearest neighbors of the Dunbars, moving from south county to Lenox Mountain a few years before them. They settled in a kind of natural, protected "bowl," a little south and west of the Dunbars, where the Lenox Reservoirs would eventually be built.

Reuben, born about 1740 in Westfield, married Sarah Curtis, and they too had nine children born in Lenox. One son, Jessie, born 1786, married Theodosia Cook, had five children between 1806 and 1819, and owned a farm on Bald Mountain until 1841. It was due south from the intersection of Dunbar Road and Reservoir Road. Bald Head later became a locally famous destination for its spectacular view.

Another son, Calvin, born 1792, married Louisa Cook in 1812 and had three children: Rodney Calvin (born 1817, who married Nancy Babcock); Sarah Emily (born 1819, who married Erastus Keith); and Albert, born 1822. Rodney Calvin and his sister Sarah Keith lived on the mountain farm. Sarah and Erastus had five children.

A plan of Lenox by Henry F. Walling, dated 1858, shows Root family members on both sides of Reservoir Road, near the Richmond Line, including the Keith family, Mrs. Louise Root, widow of Calvin, and "N. Cook," possibly short for Nathaniel Cook Root, son of Jessie, since there is no N. Cook in Lenox in the 1850 or 1860 census.

Rodney Calvin and Nancy had three children, and one of them, Calvin Henry (born 1844, marrying Addie A. Parsons), was residing at his great grandfather Reuben's homestead in 1885. Father and son tended a herd of 60 Merino sheep and 10 head of cattle.

There is still visible evidence of the lives and presence of the Dunbars and the Roots. Three generations raised their sons and daughters on the mountain, boarded a teacher, and sent them to school nearby, in the "Eighth District" or "Mountain District." Its location is shown on several maps, and its stone foundation can still be found. The size was approximately 16 by 20 feet, and parts of a stove, some brick, glass, and pieces of metal can be found in the leafy debris.

By 1865 there was no town appropriation for District Eight. The Town Report says "the number of pupils there is so small that there has been no school there for some years," which suggests that by this time the younger families had moved on.

Maps also show the location of the Dunbar homesteads. At the north end of Dunbar Road, the foundation of the barn (20' X 28'), and house (20' X 25' - fallen in) of Daniel Franklin and his son Samuel can still be found. On the south end, the cellar hole of George Dunbar's house remains, along with pieces of a metal stove, brick, bits of china and colored glass. The house was about 18' X 18', with another section on the back, almost as large.

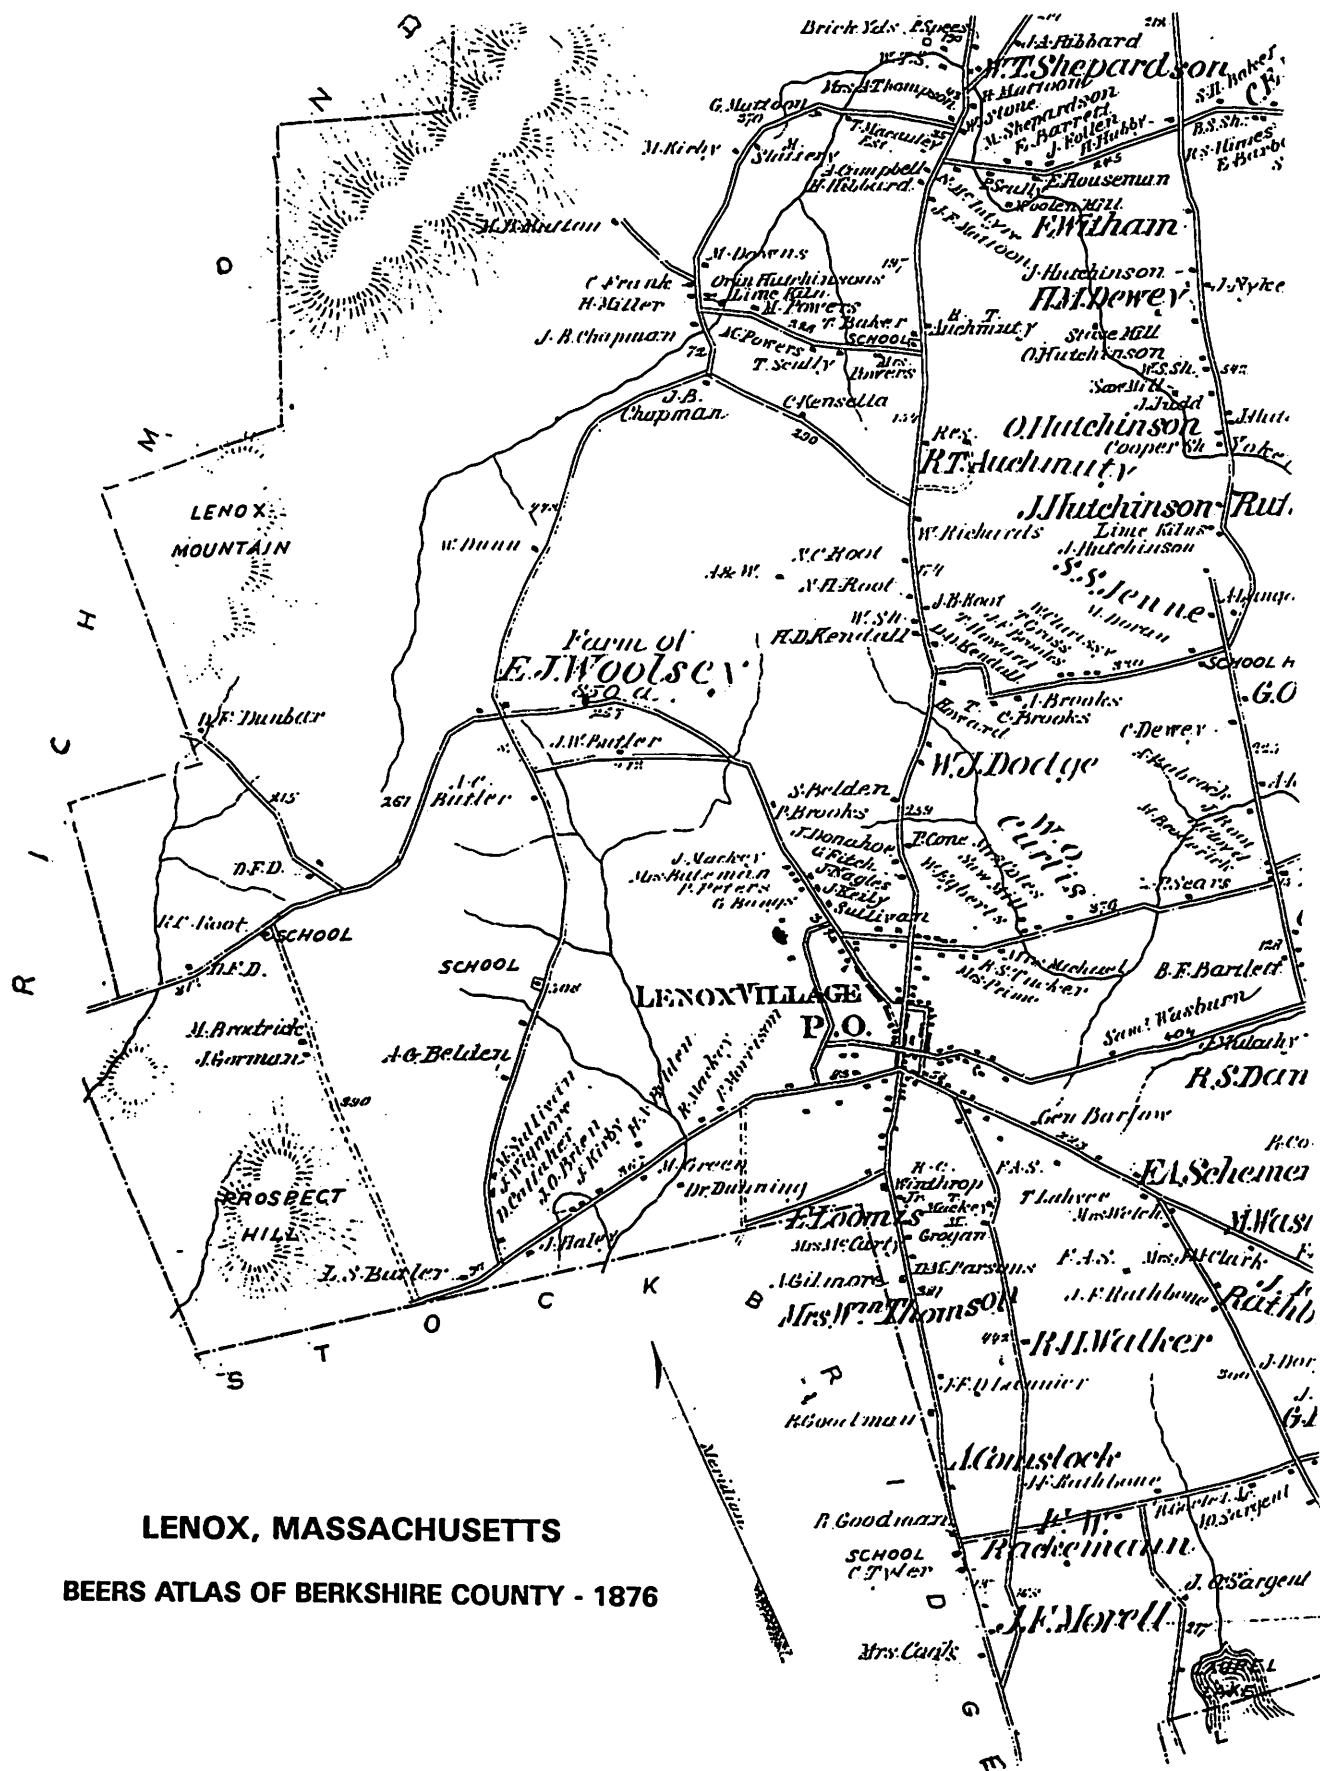

Another cellar hole of the Root family, on Reservoir Road, has been filled in, but pieces of crockery, enamel ware and the like lie about the margins. It appears that the reservoir construction may have cleared the remains of other Root family dwellings shown on Walling's 1858 map.

Now, more than two centuries later, the lands of the Dunbar and Root families are in the heart of the Yokun Ridge Reserve. Looking something like they were when these settlers first set down roots, a few years before the American Revolution. The stone walls and foundations are the only monuments to the toil, trials, or triumphs of their lives on the mountain.

The following maps show where these families were in 1876, 1893-4, and 1904:

THE BOOKSTALL

Review by J. Bradley Cooper

Early Life in Sheffield, Berkshire County, Massachusetts, A Portrait of the Ordinary People from Settlement to 1860. by James R. Miller. Hard bound, 6¼" x 9¼", 152pp, table of contents, illustrations, bibliography, index. Price $27.50 plus $5.00 S/H. Order from the Sheffield Historical Society, Box 747, Sheffield, MA 01257-0747.

The dust cover displays the credentials of the author and sets the stage for the presentation in the text. Most of the pages have voluminous footnotes, with chapter and verse, identifying sources or expanding on the text.

The first of eleven chapters, "First Comers", discusses the early settlers, their background, slavery and racial discrimination. The following chapter is devoted to crops, social organization and home industries. This expansion, together with the opening of the Erie Canal in 1825, results in an outflow of population westward, creating a steady flow of in-comers from Connecticut and then on to the west. This activity resulted in the construction of roads and bridges, and later, the railroads. All of this brought about changes in household details, hygiene, entertainment and household industries.

With these changes came problems, such as: wars, crime, violence, liquor, poverty and treatment of the poor. To this too came an establishment of Congregationalism with support from the tax systems, but abated if the taxpayer could prove bona fide membership and support of another denomination.

As of today, schooling was recognized as an important function and many of the problems encountered are still awaiting a solution.

Among the improvements in the conduct of civil and family affairs there was considerable change in medical practice, though it could hardly be considered improvement. This became a period of invasive medicine with its cupping and bleeding. The burning of sulfur was considered a major protection against infectious diseases.

As the population changes took place here were changes in the boundaries between states and their subdivisions. Eventually, the county seat was changed from Sheffield to Lenox.

Throughout the text there are a great many references to specific individuals people, which might be of special interest to genealogists.

The footnotes were particularly apropos, well-placed and useful in expanding the message of the main text.

WHAT'S IN A NAME? - STILL ANOTHER SEQUEL

In the process of producing our many indexes we encounter quite a variety of names and name combinations that are real rib ticklers. We hope you find this selection at least mildly amusing and remember, some day people will be laughing at our quaint names. (See also 16:2:41, 17:3:89, 18:4:140 and 20:3:99 for more laughs.) Readers are welcome to add to the collection.

THAT TRUNCATED ARTICLE

In Volume 22, Number 1, Page 27, we published an article on Savoy, Massachusetts Families which was taken from the Elmer I. Shepard Collection. The article was alphabetically arranged and ended with Blake. Instead of just the usual "end of article" asterisks we should have noted that the material itself ended there. We have no doubt that Mr. Shepard's work was originally complete, but after his death the collection passed through several hands and apparently was misplaced or lost, and cannot now be found. Our apologies to all who hoped to find names beyond Blake. ■

OCCUPATIONS AND LIVELIHOODS, 1780 and 1790

From The Dalton Papers, by Raymond W. Fischer; reprinted by permission of the author.

The principal livelihood of the inhabitants in Dalton was farming. The farmer was known as a yeoman or a husbandman depending upon his circumstances in life and livelihood. A person of influence or wealth was known as a gentleman. In the Dalton Papers, there are no references to farm or farmer. Many of these settlers owned their property outright; others carried the equivalent of a mortgage to a gentleman or an esquire. (Later manuscripts, after 1800, show reference to the Bank of Boston which was incorporated in 1784.)

A property transfer involving the Marsh family and Colonel Israel Williams is documented in a 1784 deed.¹ It indicated that the Colonel held the debt-instrument for lot 78 where the Marsh Tavern was located. The Marsh Tavern doubled as a meetinghouse before the Town erected its own, a short distance east, and eleven years later. The Colonel, a staunch Tory, still owned property after the Revolution. Many Tories lost their land after the Revolution.

It is a little known fact that Dalton had four establishments holding liquor licenses. At least two of these were operating as inns in the 1780's. Probably the Marsh family owned the earliest inn. The other inn was in operation only in 1785. It was owned and operated by the infamous Major John Wiley of Revolutionary War fame. In 1786, Major Wiley was off leading 250 insurgents in Shays' Rebellion. In the 1790's Daniel Foote operated an inn. A liquor license was also granted to Calvin Sprague, a retailer. The reader is directed to the Dalton Papers, Section F, 1780/1790 OCCUPATIONS AND REFERENCES, and to Section G, FAMILY SKETCHES, (see also Volume 22, Number 2 of Berkshire Genealogist) of the Marsh and Wiley families for more information.

Thomas Jefferson and James Madison stayed at the Marsh Tavern/Inn on June 6th, 1791. At this time the Inn was owned by Chester Marsh and operated by his mother Sarah.² The reason for these two future presidents being in Dalton is another story beyond the scope of this article. Jefferson and Madison were returning to Philadelphia after a lengthy excursion/vacation up the Hudson River valley to Lake Champlain, returning via Bennington, Pittsfield, Northampton, and finally on to Hartford and New York before returning to Philadelphia. Willard Sterne Randall in the American Heritage Magazine wonderfully describes the whole trip in an article.³ Jefferson actually rated each inn where he stayed as to food, accommodations, and hospitality. The Marsh Inn at Dalton was not rated; however it was known Sarah Marsh had five beautiful daughters and the Tavern was a very popular meeting place. One can only imagine living at that time, and being lucky enough to stop when the celebrated visitors were there. Many towns along the way tried to grab this prestigious pair for politicking. The duo is reported to have sneaked out of Bennington the morning after staying at "Dewy's" in Bennington. Pittsfield did not luck out as no inn is mentioned for Pittsfield. The town notables were probably quite upset that they lost the opportunity to host these famous tourists.

Ashuelot Equivalent (Dalton) did not have an abundance of tillable land. The terrain was mainly hilly, rocky, and wooded. It was the water that brought the first settlers to the area. The trail from Windsor, west through Ashuelot Equivalent, and west through Pittsfield to the mountains bordering Hancock was a valley left by the glaciers fifteen thousand years earlier. The tillable land in Ashuelot Equivalent is acknowledged by at least one geological historian as Post-glacial Lake Dalton.⁴ In this fertile valley, a yeoman could raise grain and flax, while the husbandman could raise sheep, cattle, horses, and other livestock. Judging from Town meeting minutes,⁵ Dalton had a lot of pigs. The commingling of pigs and other livestock necessitated the use of earmarks.⁶ These symbols were used as a badge of identification and ownership. Dalton Town Inventory No. 76 (See Dalton Papers) has a listing of earmarks by owner. They were controlled by the Town and could be transferred or reassigned.

Livelihoods, or occupations, of most of the Town's inhabitants are revealed in three unusual manuscripts; The Dalton Papers inventory numbers 957, 958, and 959, of One June 1792. These manuscripts are noteworthy because, for an obscure reason, one hundred and seventeen heads of households and their families were warned out of town. These warning manuscripts identified the occupation of each head-of-the-family or inhabitant on that date.

It was subsequently learned that a (pre-Revolutionary) colonial law required "Proprietors of new Townships...(be lands occupied by)...their heirs and assigns."⁸ This precluded all others from residing on their lands without first contacting the selectman for obtaining the approval of the town. Since there was no town and no selectmen until 1784, this appears to be an empty law. Be that as it may, all ignored the warnings-out, but one can only imagine the short-term panic!

In the following list, the occupations marked with an asterisk (*) were obtained from the before mentioned manuscripts. The list is representative of most of the colonial livelihoods of area towns in 1780 and 1790. The larger towns in the county had additional skills, products and services to supplement those not available in the town; examples are iron, glass, and woolen production. In the start of the nineteenth century, papermaking is added (1801) with the first paper mill (erected by Zenas Crane) in Western Massachusetts, followed by the first Dalton woolen mill in 1814.

OCCUPATION	DEFINITIONS ⁹
Attorney	Lawyer, sometimes abbreviated "Atty."
Blacksmith	Maker of horseshoes and other iron products.
Clothier	One who treats cloth by washing and pressing after weaving to take oil out of wool. His place of work was called a fulling mill .
Cooper	Barrel maker; possibly also made clapboards and shingles.
Cordwainer	One who made shoes, boots and wallets from fine leather; as opposed to a less-skilled cobbler who repaired it.
Deacon	A high ranking member of the church; often substituted for a preacher.
Esquire	A title of honor and dignity; usually a lawyer.
Gentleman	A person of influence or wealth - a status step under esquire .
Husbandman	One who bred and raised livestock - later, a farmer.
Innkeeper	One who sold food and lodging; probably had a liquor license.
Joiner	One who makes a living by knowing and joining wood by glue, different joints. Possibly a cabinet maker.
Labourer	Often, a man who owned no real estate.
Merchant	A dealer who buys and sells goods. A store owner of the time; may have had a liquor license.
Miller	A person who ran a mill. A gristmill operator who ground grain.
Plasterer	Made and installed plaster. "Plasturing"
Retailer	Same as merchant.
Surveyor	Surveying, map maker, placing boundary markers.
Tanner	One who cures animal skin to produce leather.
Taylor	A tailor for the production of clothing.
Yeoman	One who owned land or had previously owned land in small quantities. A farmer with property.

INDUSTRY - BEFORE PAPER WAS KING

Farming was the principal occupation. The documented occupations shown in the preceding list provide an example of the industries of the time. Descriptions of daily activities from within the Dalton Papers, and from the first comprehensive map of 1831 provide insight into the manufacturing and service industries which also arose in this area in the last decades of the eighteenth century.

INDUSTRY	PRODUCT OR SERVICE
Fulling Mill	Processed wool for cloth.

Furnace	Provided pig iron for the blacksmith and early industries.
Grist Mills	Provided ground grain for the populace.
Potash Manufactory	Provided potash ¹⁰ - a potassium compound for making fertilizers, and other use in the early industries.
Saw Mills	Provided lumber for construction, clapboards and shingles.
Tannery	Provided leather for boots, shoes and clothes.

OTHER INDUSTRY

NOT SPECIFICALLY DELINEATED, BUT EXISTED IN 1780/1790

The following crafts, while not always specified in the manuscripts, supported manufacturing, retailing, and service industries of the day:

WORK	PRODUCT OR SERVICE
Brewing	Cider mills were operated by several families.
Carding	Preparation of wool fibers for spinning.
Charcoal Production	For local and remote iron production.
Construction	Roads, bridges, residences and barns.
Spinning and weaving	Wool was prevalent; flax was grown for linen.

02012 SQUIER-SQUIRE(S)-GIBBS-HUNTER

Seeking the parents of Richard B. SQUIER and his probable brothers Zalmon, Ichabod, Peter, and Eliakim. The Canadian book New Brunswick Loyalists by Sharon Dubeau 1983 lists the following: "SQUIRE, RICHARD BURGESS from Lanesborough, MA. He was proscribed as a traitor and banished from the State of MA in 1778, and subsequently his property was confiscated. He was a Captain of a militia company of Loyalist refugees who arrived in New Brunswick in 1783.....His wife Phoebe died 15 May 1827, aged 81 and is buried in Kingston." ICHABOD SQUIRES, Richard's brother, was born about 1755 in New York and discharged from the British military in 1783. He moved to Kings City, New Brunswick, Canada and later Murray Township, Ontario, Canada. He married SYLVIA GIBBS on January 12, 1780 in Amenia, Dutchess County, New York, daughter of Job GIBBS and Sylvia HUNTER. She was born November 17, 1759 in Sharon Township, Litchfield Co., CT and died after 1799 in Murray Township, Ontario, Canada. Ichabod Squires is listed on the muster roles of the Prince of Wales American Volunteers. He was a corporal in August 1777 muster role for Captain Andrew Maxwell's Grenadier Company. He was taken prisoner in January 1778. His name was added to a list on a land petition initiated by Captain James Dickinson. His presumed brothers, Zalmon, Eliakim, and Peter are also on this list. Ichabod Squires was later a Sergeant in Colonel Brown's Provincial Regiment of Associated Loyalists according to his second land petition of 1797.

KNIGHT b Jan 22, 1852, in Orwell, VT (per his death certificate). Shoreham 1860 Census shows Fanny KNIGHT living with George W. DOANE (Reuben, Levi, David, David, John, John) (1811-1888) (Fanny's son Frank is not in this census listing). Fanny & George eventually married Jul 10, 1861 in Sudbury, VT, and had several children: Martha b Dec 27, 1861, Shoreham, VT;

Helen b Jan 19, 1864, Shoreham, VT; Antonette or Annett b 1865); Della or Adele b 1866; Affia C. b Mar 19, 1868, Shoreham, VT; Dorus W. b 1871; & Otis S. b Jul 15, 1873, Whiting, VT. What happened to Samuel KNIGHT, and what are his origins? What is Fanny KNIGHT'S maiden name and place of birth? Information on any of these names would be appreciated.

THE FAMILY OF AGRIPPA HULL - A CORRECTION

By Emilie S. Piper

In the article about Hull's family, published in the Winter 2001 issue of Berkshire Genealogist, we said Joab Benny, who took Agrippa to Stockbridge as a boy, had been a slave of "Ebenezer Hunt." This is an error, and instead should have said Deacon Jonathan Hunt, Jr., as shown in the manuscript records of Jonathan Edwards' Church in Northampton. Our thanks to Dr. Kenneth Minkema for supplying this information.
