P r e s i d e n t ' s M e s s a g e

This edition of the TIMBERTOWN log marks the beginning of our Saginaw Genealogical Society's tenth year of existence and the start of the ninth year of publication of the Log. I am looking forward to this coming year as president of this fine organization.

It is my wish, as well as that of your ofther officers, to continue promoting the original objectives of our founders, which included the "collecting, preserving, and publishing of biographical and local historical materials" and "directing the education" of all those interested in genealogy. To achieve these wise goals, I am pleased to announce the following calendar events:

Beginning Workshop, February 28, 1981, Ruth Freeland, Chairman.

Advanced Workshop, March 28, 1981, Doris Morford, Chairman

Annual Seminary, April 25, 1981, Douglas and Gertrude Peabody, co-chairmen.

Further details on each of these events will be appearing in future issues of the LOG and our monthly Newsletter.

Other projects, such as the publication of the Frankenmuth Area History, new cemetery readings, field trips, etc., are in full progress. If you have an interest in any of these or can suggest new ideas, PLEASE LET US KNOW! We welcome all suggestions and all helpers. Remember, we must all take an active part and make our desires known to keep our society as valuable in the future, as it has been in the past.

Diane

A RECIPE (for Preserving Paper)

Through the years, many methods have been brought forward to preserve those old newspaper clippings, so dear to the hearts of genealogists. The Detroit Free Press and the Reader's Digest as well as a Seattle, Washington, newspaper have all printed recipes for preserving newspaper items. All three boil down to the same basic recipe: take a couple of spoonsful or a tablet of milk magnesia, dissolve and thoroughly mix in a quart of club soda. This can be used immediately or refrigerated over night, as desired. Immerse the newspaper page in the solution in a large tray or container, keeping it flat and soak for an hour, then remove to some supporting material, such as a sheet of plastic, window screening or netting. Dry the page (or clippings) between sheets of white blotting paper, changing the blotters as needed and keeping it under the weight of a stack of books. Blotting paper can be purchased at most photographic stores and is non-contaminating. Once dry, the acid content of the paper will be neutralized and the stable alkaline base will remain. Most of the very early papers were compounded of rag paper, but later innovations in paper production brought increased use of wood fibres for this purpose. The cellulose, of which the wood fibres are made of decomposes under conditions of light and humidity and is hastened by the acidic composition of the chemicals used to produce the paper. Once the paper begins to decompose, the process continues to the detriment of the newspaper page.

A friend of ours, Daniel H. Haigh, is a research chemist at Dow Chemical Company of Midland and was nice enough to check the above process out and to give the following account of just why this process does work:

Milk of Magnesia is Magnesium Hydroxide ($Mg(OH)_2$). Club Soda is a solution of carbon dioxide (CO_2) in water (H_2O), forming the weak acid-carbonic acid (H_2CO_3). When the Milk of Magnesia reacts with carbon dioxide by way of the carbonic acid, magnesium carbonates are formed. All of these compounds are "basic". They react with acids to give neutral products, so that by soaking paper in a solution of these compounds, the acids in the paper are neutralized, and when the water evaporates, some of the carbonates are left with the paper to act as "acid scavengers" for extended protection.

Actually, milk of magnesia itself would give the same protection if it could get at the acids, but it is much less (around 150-170 times) soluble in water than are the carbonates. So, by reacting milk of magnesia with club soda, you make a product wherein the "active ingredient" is more soluble, and hence more available.

If any of our readers wish to consider the chemistry more thoroughly, Mr. Haigh, who prepared this article, has checked it out and approves this application for the use of preserving newspaper.

Notable Quotables

It is not observed in history that families improve with time. It is rather discovered that the whole matter is like a comet, of which the brightest part is the head; and the tail, although long and luminous, is gradually shaded into obscurity.....George William Curtis

A Note from the Genealogical Supplies Chairman--

Dear Members,

As chairman of supplies for the Saginaw Genealogical Society, I would like very much to get some input from the membership as to the regions they would like to have covered in the books we purchase for resale through the Society to our membership. As our membership has grown considerably in the last two years and the roots are in many places, I would like new ideas. If you have any suggestions as to what areas you would like to see covered, please jot them down and give them to me at a meeting or mail them to me. It is my feeling that this will be a better way of getting a better selection of books that will help everyone. Thank you.

Frederick T. Pike, 3121 Fulton St., Saginaw, Michigan, 48601
